Gerrard Larriett Shampoo and Spray Review

One of the most amazing pampering product that I have tested lately is the Gerrard Larriett Shampoo and Spray. I just love the smell of the Happy Jasmine line. I'm not sure how to describe it well but it gives you that "spa" feeling. Too bad some human shampoos don't even smell this good. Anyway, let me just give you some of my insights regarding these products:

First of all the products are Made in USA. That's one of the things I look for when using any product in the current market. With a lot to choose from, how do you pick the right products? I made these list which I will be posting in my blog soon. I hope you can learn a lot from it.

Opening the shampoo, you are greeted by this seal. Quite good since most product neglect the simple things that can usually impress consumer.

The packaging is also nice. The bottles are sturdy and not the "squishy" kind. Cap is good as it does not spill around and the label is of good quality stickers. This might sound like trivial details to some but this is usually what captures the attention of every consumer.

On to the imprtatnt part. The actual product review. I tested this out on my Shih Tzu "Pip". Quite the charmer really. He always has that doggy smell. Hmm, let's see if this actually works.

This shampoo product better be good!

As you might have noticed, the pictures were a little bit dark. I was using a smaller camera while giving Pip a bath. I would have appreciated having an assistant but since all of them are busy we just had to make do.

Tadaa! Fresh from the spa! Ok, maybe that was a little to much complement on my skills. But the scent that wafted around was absolutely lovely. Like you were in a field of Jasmine flowers. very warm and tropical indeed

Overall, it was a great product. The fragrance is amazing but it isn't overwhelming. The consistency of the product is quite and Pip did not keep blinking his eyes which made me conclude that it could be quite gentle too. As for the spray, it keeps them smelling fresh and the coat and hair shiny, however I could still not give my verdict because it could be just because of my constant brushing.
