More Than Words

By Lance Livesay
(1963-2005)

I'm more than my words, and I'm more than my deeds.
I'm more than my hist'ry, and I'm more than my needs.
I'm more than my thinking, and I'm more than my grief.
I'm more than my doubting, and I'm more than my belief.

And I'm thankful for rememb'ring who I am and what I've learned.
I've been given gifts of Spirit, none of which I've ever earned.
For these gifts are given freely as I turn toward the sun,
As I turn away from darkness, and open to the wonders of love.

I'm more than the future and I'm more than the past.
I'm more than books or knowledge and I'm more than circumstance.
I'm more than I know and I'm more than what I see.
I'm more than what happens in life's circ'ling mystery.

And I'm thankful for rememb'ring who I am and what I know.
I am made of flesh and spirit with a million years to grow.
And I'm thankful for forgiveness, for the peace that fills my heart.
And I'm thankful for the beauty, and music and the art
Of letting go.

I'm more than my youth, and I'm more than my years.
I'm more than my body and I'm more than my tears.
I'm more than my work and I'm more than my fear.
I'm more than the money that I'd like to make this year.

It won't buy me what's important like the laughter of my friends.
It won't buy me piece of mind or gifts that never have an end,
Like words of love.
We are thankful for rememb'ring who we are and what we know.
We are made of flesh and Spirit with a million years to grow.
Grow into love.
