“It is difficult to realise that Ackté’s sensational début at Covent Garden was as Salome in Richard Strauss’ opera. Here she sings... with grace and excellent coloratura technique, and although she was Finnish, the style is typically French, and with immaculate diction.

“Agustarello Affre held his own with Escalaïs, de Reszke, Van Dyck, Alvarez, Saléza, Scaramberg, Muratore and Franz in a career that lasted two decades. Affre made his début at the Paris Opéra in 1890 as Edgardo in Lucia with Nellie Melba. At the Opéra, he created rôles in operas by Massenet and Saint-Saëns and also sang Canio and Belmonte for the first time. Affre never sang at the Opéra-Comique, but during his career he made guest appearances in Lyon, Marseille, Brussels, London, New Orleans, Havana and San Francisco.” - Robert Baxter, Program Notes for Marston’s CARMEN

“Though her first names included Charlotte and Marie, she was known on stage as Pauline Agussol. She graduated from the Paris Conservatory and was recruited by the Paris Opéra. Her début was as Urbain in LES HUGUENOTS on 19 September 1888. That season also saw her as Stéphano in the first Paris Opéra performance of Gounod’s ROMÉO ET JULIETTE (28 November) with Adelina Patti, the de Reszké brothers, Léon Melchissédec and Jean-François Delmas. Agussol soon added Siébel in FAUST and she continued to perform these roles throughout her 20-year Paris Opéra career. Among other creations and first performances, Agussol sang Ascagne in the Paris Opéra’s staging of Berlioz’s PRISE DE TROIE in 1899. Her final season at the Paris Opéra was 1907. She recorded for G&T, beginning in 1901. She also recorded for Zonophone, Odéon, Favorite and APGA, [the latter] of which she was one of the founding members.” - Vincent Giroud, Marston Program Notes

“Among those ‘minor’ companies that flourished in France before the end of the first decade, there is one that stands out above all the others for its originality of organization and its technical excellence. A.P.G.A. (L’Association Phonique des Grands Artistes) was founded in May, 1906...with a group of ten artists: Agustarello Affre, Charlotte Agussol, André Gresse, Jean Noté, Alice Verlet, Henri Weber, Bergeret, Dranem, Mayol & Polin....The records were uniform in size: 27cm. or about 10½ inches....All A.P.G.A. records play at an average speed of 86 r.p.m., and I know of many that go well over 90. These extraordinary speeds might have accounted for the lack of sales....However, when pitched properly, these records are astoundingly good – I might venture to say better than any other needle-cut record of the period.” - Victor Girard, THE RECORD COLLECTOR, 1954

“Alvarez sang Nicias in the world premiere of Massenet’s THAÏS on 20 June, 1894, and in 1895 sang in the world premiere of Augusta Holmès’ LA MONTAGNE NOIRE. Two years later appeared as Walther von Stolzing in the Paris premiere of DIE MEISTERSINGER. In 1897 he performed in the world premiere of Bruneau’s MESSIDOR, and in 1901 the world premiere of Xavier Leroux’s ASTARTE. He was well-aquainted with Jules Massenet and the then-known composer Isidore de Lara, and almost every year he guested frequently from 1893 to 1903 at Covent Garden. Here he sang on the 20 June 1894 the role of Araquil in the world premiere of the Massenet's LA NAVARRAISSE. In the 1899-1903 seasons he appeared at the Metropolitan Opera in New York (début as Roméo in Gounod’s ROMÉO ET JULIETTE).”

“Stracciari made records to which one says at different times ‘Fair’, ‘Good’, ‘Splendid’, ‘Excellent’. But there is also the cry of ‘Great’, and in my experience only one of the baritones now under discussion provokes that. This is Pasquale Amato.”

- J.B. Steane, THE GRAND TRADITION, P.142
In 1900, Anselmi made his début in Genoa, singing Rodolfo, the Duke and Edgardo (to Fanny Toresella’s Lucia). That same year he appeared at the San Carlo in Naples, where he sang with Angelica Pandolfini and Rina Giachetti (the sister of Caruso’s mistress) in LE MASCHERE, a new work by Mascagni. Anselmi made his London début at Covent Garden (1901) as the Duke in Rigoletto (with Suzanne Adams as Gilda). He returned to London on several occasions, but was especially admired in St. Petersburg, Buenos Aires, Milan (La Scala), Warsaw and Madrid in a variety of rôles that included Cavaradossi, Loris in FEDORA, Maurizio in ADRIANA LECOUVREUR, Osaka in IRIS, Lensky, Edgardo, Nadir in PESCATORI DI PERLE and many others. He sang Almalviva to Adelina Patti’s Rosina in her last ever operatic appearance…he possessed [a] lovely voice and was very musically intelligent. The records speak for themselves so far as Anselmi’s vocal powers and musical intelligence are concerned. After listening to only a few, one senses that his sole concern in their making was the artistic presentation of the music he sang, as opposed to the glorification of his own voice. There are trills delivered with a coloratura skill that must have been the envy of many a soprano, and high Cs enough to satisfy the multitudes who base their evaluation of a tenor’s talents on this one magical note. Anselmi proves why he is so highly regarded to this day by collectors of fine historical recordings.”

“Aumonier entered the Paris Conservatory as a pupil of Léon Melchissédec. Most of his career was spent on the stages of provincial theaters including Monte Carlo, Lausanne, Brussels, Algiers, Nice, and Rouen. He appeared with van Dyck, Albers, Demougeot, and Caruso. Aumonier took part in the premiere of Edouard Trémisot’s PYRAME ET THISBÉ (Monte Carlo, 1904), Mazellier’s GRAZIELLA (Andréa, Theatre des Arts in Rouen, 1913), and Trémisot’s STAMBOUL (Mehmed Pacha, Algiers Opera, 1924). He also sang at the Paris Opéra in SAMSON ET DALILA, SALAMMBÔ, AÏDA, ROMÉO ET JULIETTE, AND RIGOLETTO. Aumonier, who recorded extensively for all of the French record labels, possessed one of the most beautiful basso profondo voices of his time.

“After 1902, when Barker (Baker) sang at a St James Hall Ballad Concert in London, he became known as a baritone of rare musicianship. In 1905, along with Mary Garden, Nellie Melba, and Giovanni Zenatello, he sang at Windsor Castle at a state concert in honour of the King of Greece. He toured the USA in 1908 and, with Albani, the British Isles in 1909, and was described as Great Britain’s greatest baritone. Barker emigrated to the USA in 1913 and moved to Canada in 1914 as the first organist-choirmaster at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, Toronto. The critic of The World described his singing after a Toronto recital with Healey Willan at the piano, 1 Dec., 1915: ‘His voice is fine in timbre, his presentation sincere and unaffected, and his technical attack precise and accurate’. He was conductor of the CBC programs ‘Vesper Hour’ and ‘Eventide’ from 1939 until 1956.”

“Belhomme studied at the Paris Conservatory winning second prizes for singing and for opéra-comique. He made his début at the Opéra-Comique on 11 November 1879 in Félicien David’s LALLA-ROUCK (Baskir). At the Opéra-Comique, Belhomme sang in the world premieres of Offenbach’s LES CONTES D’HOFMANN (Crespel) and Charpentier’s LOUIS (the minor role of ‘le vieux Bohème’). He also participated in lesser-known world premieres by Paladilhe, Lecocq, Pierné, Rousseau, and others. In addition to being a member of the Opéra-Comique, Belhomme sang with the opera houses in Lyons, Marseilles, Brussels, Monte Carlo, and Nice. Belhomme was known to be a fine actor and was a favorite with the public. He recorded a large group of cylinders and discs for Pathé and a lesser number of sides for G&T and Odéon.

“In 1886 Bispham went to Italy where he studied with Vannuccini in Florence and Francesco Lamperti in Milan; later he studied in London with Shakespeare and Randegger. He made his operatic début as Longueville in Messager’s LA BASOCHE (English Opera House, London,3 Nov., 1891), in which his comic acting ability, as well as his singing, won praise. He made his first appearance in serious opera as Kurwenal in TRISTAN UND ISOLDE (Drury Lane, 25 June, 1892). He was particularly effective in the Wagnerian baritone roles and made his American début with the Metropolitan Opera as Beckmesser (18 Nov., 1896), and was on the Metropolitan roster 1896-97, 1898-99, and 1900-03. His autobiography, A QUAKER SINGER’S RECOLLECTIONS, was published in 1920, New York.”

“'Alessandro Bonci was an Italian lyric tenor known for his association with the bel canto repertoire. Bonci made his début in Parma in 1896, singing the rôle of Fenton in Giuseppe Verdi’s FALSTAFF at the Teatro Regio. Such was his success that before the end of his first season he was engaged to sing at La Scala, where he débuted in Bellini’s I PURITANI. Appearances elsewhere in Europe followed, including at London’s Royal Opera House. He first sang at Covent Garden in 1900 and he would return there in 1903 and 1907-08. Bonci’s voice was captured on disc by the Fonotipia, Edison and Columbia companies. His first records were made in 1905 and his last in 1926. On them, he is heard to best advantage in operatic arias by Bellini, Rossini, Donizetti and Gluck, but he was also renowned for his Rodolfo in Puccini’s LA BOHEME, his Riccardo in Verdi’s UN BALLO IN MASCHERA and his Duke of Mantua in Verdi’s RIGOLETTO. Bonci was a small man and his voice was not overly large either; but it was sweet-toned, stylish and supple, with excellent high note

“Bonini was first on stage in Foggia, 1896, in Verdi’s LA FORZA DEL DESTINO. He was then heard in Malta, Cairo, Cremona, Palermo, and Odessa, as well as at the Teatro Colón (Buenos Aires), 1901. In Milan, Bonini was Athaniel in the Italian premiere of Massenet’s THAÏS at the Teatro Lirico and at La Scala in Ponchielli’s I LITUAN. In the season of 1911-12, he returned to La Scala as Hans Sachs, Raimondo (Mascagni’s ISABEAU) and Idraste (Gluck’s ARMIDA). He interpreted principal baritone roles in a host of operas and was active until the mid-1920s. Bonini’s only recordings were for Fonotipia (some released on Odeon as well) from 1904-1908.”

“Hermine Bosetti was born Hermine von Flick in Vienna. She spent only one season at the Hofoper (1900-1901), where she appeared as Zerlina, Siebel, and Adele. She gained stardom in Munich, where she sang mainly coloratura repertoire, but also heavier roles such as Clo-Cio-San, Octavian, Salome, and Elsa. She returned to Vienna in 1908 as a guest in more substantial roles such as The Queen of the Night and Marguerite de Valois. She recorded for G&T, Odeon, and Gramophone.”

“The number of tenors throughout the first half of the twentieth century considered great exponents of the rôle of Otello ever since Francesco Tamagno premièred Verdi’s opera in 1887, can be counted on the fingers of one hand. One of them was Icilio Calleja who became the second tenor after Tamagno to sing this demanding rôle at the same opera house….After holding a number of auditions, both Arrigo Boito and Tullio Serafin were decided on the best choice for the title-rôle which fell on Icilio Calleja. Calleja had made an in-depth study of the effects of convulsions, jerking and facial congestion that are brought about by a fit of epilepsy. He would then put them to good use in Act III when the Moor is overcome by his rage and emotion and falls in a swoon. The Italian newspaper ‘Adriatico’ of the 24 November, 1913 reported that Arrigo Boito felt duty bound to visit Calleja in his dressing room after the third act, to congratulate him for his excellent portrayal which he rated as the finest since Tamagno.” - Emy Scicluna, GRANDI TENORI

“Cannetti studied with Melchiorre Vidal in Vienna and made her début in 1899 at Fossombrone in FAUST. Later that year she sang in LOHENGRIN with the tenor Francesco Bravi, whom she subsequently married. His early death brought her career to a temporary halt, but upon its resumption in 1909 she achieved her greatest success to date as Chrysothemis in the Italian premiere of ELEKTRA, at La Scala. In 1913 she appeared in another Strauss premiere in Italy, that of FEUERSNOT, and at Turin in 1914 sang the title role in the world premiere of Zandonai’s FRANCESCA DA RIMINI. Other notable events included commemorative performances of Boito’s MEFISTOFELE under Arturo Toscanini and a personal triumph in Buenos Aires in Italo Montemezzi’s L’AMORE DEL TRE RE. She retired in 1928. Her recordings show warmth of voice and emotion, with a quick, somewhat uneven vibrato, probably more acceptable then than it is now.” - Ashot Arakelyan, Forgotten Opera Singers

Noted for her acting as well as her beauty, Caprile found her niche in roles requiring particular dramatic skills….In addition to success throughout Italy, she was a favorite in South America, particularly as Violetta, and also appeared in Russia. “Marie Charbonnel made her opera début in 1901 at the Grand Théâtre de Lyons in SAMSON ET DALILA (Dalila) and then appeared there in WERTHER, CARMEN, AND ORPHÉE. She made her Paris Opéra début as Dalila on 2 June 1908. During that season, she also participated in the first Paris Opéra performances of GÖTTERDÄMMERUNG (First Norn) and DAS RHEINGOLD (Erda), and sang in HAMLET, AÏDA, and RIGOLETTA. The following year, she sang in SIEGFRIED, DIE WALKÜRE and HENRY VIII. She made her début at the Opéra-Comique on 27 October 1910 in CARMEN, followed by performances in GALATHÉE, LOUISE and DER FLIEGENDE HOLLÄNDER. She appeared in Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, and Monaco, and gave a number of recitals, notably at the Salle Gaveau in Paris. Her resplendent voice is immediately recognizable, and her secure technique places her in the front rank of French contraltos.” - Christopher Norton-Welsh, Marston Program Notes

“The pièce de resistance is the ‘Disco Commemorativo Omaggio a Verdi’, issued in 1913 in observance of Giuseppe Verdi’s centenary. Verdi had been dead only 12 years, and the record is made by the regular cast and orchestra belonging to La Scala in 1913. For some listeners, this version will have a vibrancy and drama more thrilling than the more famous recording by Caruso, Alda and Journet. So if one desires to hear the music of Verdi much as Verdi himself heard it, then Fonotipia is the place to go.”

“Dani made his début in 1894 in Firenze as Duke in RIGOLETTO. In 1898 he again appeared as Duke and Edgardo, but this time at the Teatro Alfieri in Livorno, where he sang together with Titta Ruffo. Then, at the Teatro Politeama in Pisa, he sang the role of Manrico in IL TROVATORE. In the 1902-03 season he appeared at the Metropolitan opera where he sang in RIGOLETTO, PAGLIACCI, LA TRAVIATA, LA BOHÈME and DON PASQUALE with Marcella Sembrich and Antonio Scotti. At the Teatro Coliseo in Buenos Aires he guested in 1907 as Elvio in LA SONNAMBULA, as Alfredo in LA TRAVIATA (with Luisa Tetrazzini), as Almaviva in IL BARBIERE DI SIVIGLIA and as Nemorino in L’ELISIR D’AMORE. In 1907 he was also sang at the Teatro Politeama of São Paulo. In 1913 he appeared in his native Firenze, Teatro Della Pergola as Greux in MANON. Dani made his Metropolitan Opera début as the Duke in RIGOLETTO on 5 December, 1902 opposite Marcella Sembrich as Gilda, Louise Homer as Maddalena, Antonio Scotti in the title role and Marcel Journet as Sparafucile. His contract required him to be available for a four-month season. In addition to the Duke, his roles were Alfredo, Canio, Rodolfo, and Ernesto in DON PASQUALE. Dani sang at the Met only during 1902-03. The next season his roles, except Ernesto, were assumed by Enrico Caruso.” - Ashot Arakelyan, Forgotten Opera Singers

“During his 36-year career, de Angelis appeared on stage on more than 1500 occasions, performing a repertoire of 57 different operas. He was especially celebrated for his powerful portrayal of the title rôle in Boito’s MEFISTOFELE, which he sang at least 500 times between 1906 and 1938. Making his début at La Scala in 1907, and appearing often under the baton of La Scala’s principal conductor, Arturo Toscanini, in 1913, he created there the rôle of Archibaldo in Montemezzi’s L’AMORE DEI TRE RE. He also sang at the Paris Opéra, in 1909, as the High Priest in Spontini’s LA VESTALE. Other than singing at the Lyric Opera of Chicago during the years 1910-11 and 1915-20, de Angelis’ career was based almost entirely in Europe. He did, however, make a sequence of acclaimed appearances at the Teatro Colón in Buenos Aires, beginning with the 1911 season.

de Angelis possessed one of the most impressive bass voices produced by Italy; his was a big, dark and well blended vocal instrument with strong top notes and plenty of stamina and carrying power. Chronologically, de Angelis succeeded the famous late-19th century basses Francesco Navarini and Vittorio Arimondi and anticipated the rise to prominence in the 1920’s of Ezio Pinza and Tancredi Pasero. He made his first recordings in 1907/08 for Fonotipia, and his last in the late 1920’s and early ’30s for Columbia. In 1931, he recorded MEFISTOFELE in Milano. It is the only rôle that he recorded in its entirety.” - David Cutler THE RECORD COLLECTOR, 2014

“Delmas made his début at the Paris Opera on 28 September 1886 as Saint-Bris (LES HUGUENOTS), which began a long association with that house, leaving him little time to sing outside of France. The notable exceptions were the Mariinsky in Saint Petersburg, the San Carlo in Lisbon, and the Monte Carlo Opera House in Monaco. Delmas was particularly successful in the major Wagnerian roles including Hans Sachs, Wotan, and Hagen. He was also a well-known interpreter of the standard French repertoire including FAUST, SIGURD, GUILLAUME TELL, and SAMSON ET DALILA. Delmas holds the record of taking part in more creator-roles than any other singer in the Paris Opera’s history: Twenty-one, including Massenet’s LE MAGÉ (Amour, 16 March 1891), THAI (Athanaël, 16 March 1894), and ARIANE (Peritrous, 28 October 1906). Delmas had an incredible range, ‘…which was equally powerful in bottom F of the bass register as it was at the top of G of the tenor’s. (Georges Picch, MUSICA, November 1905) and his voice possessed warmth and authority. He recorded for G&T, Pathé, Zonophone, Fonotipia, Odéon, and Opéra-Saphir. All of Delmas’ records are highly sought by collectors worldwide.’

“Although he had nothing like the brazen power of a Titta Ruffo or any of the other large-voiced baritones of his time, Giuseppe de Luca made up in refinement what he may have lacked in sheer volume. His mastery of vocal technique allowed him to produce a finely concentrated tone that carried well and to sing with nearly undiminished quality into advanced age. In his stagecraft, too, de Luca was adept, creating memorable characterizations without ever chewing the scenery. Over his long career, he made many recordings, nearly all of them representing him at his best....Equally accomplished as a dramatic singer and a comic actor, de Luca left numerous recordings confirming the consummate level of his art.”

Adamo Didur made his operatic début in Rio de Janeiro in 1894, after which he appeared in Russia. He sang at La Scala, Milan, in 1903–1906, and at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, in 1905. He also appeared with the Warsaw Opera from 1899 to 1903. Later, he travelled to Argentina, singing in Buenos Aires, 1905–1908. Didur's North American début came at the Manhattan Opera House in 1907. Didur made his Metropolitan Opera début on 14 November 1908, singing Ramfis in Aïda. He remained with the company for a quarter of a century and became one of its principal bass singers. It was at the Met in 1913 that he appeared in the title role in Boris Godunov in the American premiere of Mussorgsky's opera. He also created roles in three Puccini operas at the Met, namely, Fanciulla del West and the Il Tabarro and Gianni Schicchi segments of Il Trittico. He also appeared in the world première of Die Königskinder. His last appearance at the Met was in The Tales of Hoffman on 11 February 1932. "Didur's large, sonorous and magnificently rich-toned voice was in its prime between the late 1890s and the World War I period."

"Endowed with a beautiful voice and passion for the theater, Michel Dufour came to Paris and studied with Léon Melchissédec. He was hired at the Opéra-Comique and enjoyed a great career there singing Figaro in Barberie, with extraordinary verve, very great not only as a singer but as an actor. From that time Michel Dufour did several creations (27 Nov., 1897 – Massenet’s SAPHO (Restaurant Patron); 2 Feb., 1900 – Charpentier’s LOUISE (the Songwriter); 10 May, 1898 in d’Indy’s FERVAAL (Gwelkingubar), etc. He left the Opéra-Comique in 1900 to sing at the Grand Theatre Khedivial Cairo."

"Louis-Jean-Emile Dupouy was born in Paris and made his début at the Gaîté-Lyrique in 1908, where he sang Ourrias in Mireille. (He was on loan from the Opéra-Comique, where he appeared as early as 1907). There he mostly sang a variety of comprimario roles. His most important assignments seem to have been Alfo in Cavalleria Rusticana and d’Orbel (Germont père) in La Traviata. He took part in some premiers (Snégourotchka in 1908) and creations, including Solange by Gaston Salvayre, from which he recorded an aria, though not from his stage role. He would be completely forgotten today had he not made over forty sides for Gramophone (with operetta items made under the name Jean Duez) and other companies between 1909 and 1913. All of his recordings reveal a good voice and fine style."

“...the recital magician Karl Erb...had been a member of the Munich ensemble all the way back in the days when Bruno Walter wielded the baton on the conductor's podium of the opera house. Hans Pfitzner himself was the one who elevated Erb's unique interpretation of the title rôle in his PALESTRINA to a position high in the heavens of his admiration. The remarkable thing about Erb's song interpretation was that it was not just the sheer beauty of his voice that made all the difference...it was also his interpretative acumen. I had the good fortune to be able to learn and profit from the impressions any number of great recitalists made on me in the course of my long life, but ultimately it was Paul Bender and Karl Erb who sparked my great love for the art song.”

“Léon Escalais is the prototypical French heroic tenor, a French Tamagno with penetrating power, flawless registration, and pealing high notes, all produced with little apparent effort...his voice was undoubtedly the most voluminous in his category....”

- Gary A.Galo, ARSC Journal, Vol. 41, #1, Spring 2010

“Escalaïs’ Paris Opéra début was in GUILLAUME TELL (Arnold) on 12 October 1883, just three months after graduating from the Conservatory, where he had won first prize in song and second prize in opera. Also in 1883 at the Paris Opéra, he sang Eléazar in LA JUIVE, and in 1884 he sang the title role in ROBERT LE DIABLE (opposite his soon-to be-wife and fellow-Conservatory graduate, Marie-Antoinette Lecureu, who sang Alice), and Raoul in LES HUGUENOTS. Escalaïs made his La Scala début in LA JUIVE (Eléazar) on 31 January 1881 to poor reviews; created the role of Lusignan in Paul Vérange’s ZAIRE (28 May 1890, Paris Opéra); and also at the Paris Opéra on 16 March 1891, he sang in Massenet’s LE MAGE (Zarastra.) After 1892, he left the Paris Opéra following a falling out with the management. He then sang at a number of the major French provincial houses, Marseilles being chief among them. He made an important début at the Teatro de São Carlos in December 1905, again singing Eléazar in LA JUIVE. He returned to the Paris Opéra during the 1907–1908 season, where he sang in GUILLAUME TELL (Arnold) and in AÏDA (Radames.) For the 1909–1910 season, Escalaïs performed numerous roles at the French Opera House at New Orleans to ecstatic acclaim; this marked the opera house’s 50th anniversary as well as his own. He was a well-liked figure in the opera world whose voice will be remembered for its trumpet-like brilliance. His stunning high notes are unique on records. He recorded exclusively for Fonotipia.”

“Maria Farneti was well known as an interpreter of verismo operas. In 1899 she début at the prestigious Teatro Regio of Turin in its première performance of Mascagni’s IRIS to an enormous reception. She appeared in the U.S. in 1902 under Mascagni’s direction and was a great success in Buenos Aires, where she created Mascagni’s ISABEAU in 1911. In 1912 Farneti sang in the local premiere of PAOLO E FRANCESCA at Genoa and later in the local première of ISABEAU at Naples. She sang in the local premiere of ISABEAU at Brescia and in February of 1913 she sang in the Rome première to unanimously favorable reviews and huge audience response. The summer found her on another long visit to South America, and ISABEAU was again the centerpiece. The tour began at Buenos Aires’ Coliseo and included stops at Rosario, Cordoba, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paolo. In addition to ISABEAU, Farneti sang in LOHENGRIN, IRIS, MADAMA BUTTERFLY, Nepomuceno's ABUL and MEFISTOFELE. Bernardo de Muro, who was to perform Folco nearly four hundred times during a twenty five year career, sang with Farneti in the two Mascagni operas throughout the tour. Maria [was invited by] Umberto Giordano to appear in the Italian première of MADAME SANS GENE, an offer that was immediately accepted.”

“Nini Frascani made her début at Naples in LA FAVORITA. In 1903 she was at La Scala as Fricka in the Italian première of Wagner’s RHEINGOLD and appeared there also as Principessa in ADRIANA LECOUVREUR. In 1909 she appeared as Neris in an important première of Cherubini’s MEDEA. In 1905 she guested at the Teatro San Carlo in Naples in the premiere of Leopoldo Mugnone’s opera VITA BRETONNE. In 1904 she sang at Covent Garden, in 1906 and from 1914-15 with great success she appeared at the Teatro Colón in Buenos Aires. In 1906 in this same theatre she sang in Franchetti’s LA FIGLIA DI JORIO, in RIGOLETTO and in WALKÜRE. In 1909 she again appeared at the Teatro San Carlo in Naples, this time as queen in Thomas’ AMLETO. In 1911 at the Teatro Regio in Parma she guested as Laura in LA GIOCONDA. Since 1909 she had at Scala a persistently successful career; she participated there in among other works in 1911 in the première of Dukas’ AnANE ET BARBE-BLEUE. In 1913 she appeared at the Verdi-commemorative celebrations in many big Italian theaters. She married the tenor Gaetano Tommasini and appeared with him in North America. In 1921 with Favorita Opera Company in Manhattan Theatre, New York, later with San Carlo Opera Company. During the 1930s she picked up her career and then lived in Milan where she opened together with Gaetano Tommasini an opera studio”

“Garbin’s teachers in Milan were Alberto Selva and Vittorio Orefice. He made his début (1891) as Don Alvaro in "La Forza del Destino," in Vicenza. Then he performed in Milan (Teatro Dal Verme) and Naples (Teatro San Carlo). In 1892 he sang at the Teatro Carlo Felice in Genoa in the première of Franchetti’s" CRISTOFORO COLOMBO. He repeated the rôle of Guevara in 1897 at La Scala. He sang Fenton in 1893 in the première of Verdi’s FALSTAFF, while his wife, the soprano Adelina Stehle created the rôle of Nannetta. They appeared together for many years, principally in the Puccini operas. In 1900 he sang the rôle of Dufresne at the Teatro Lirico in Milan in the première of Leoncavallo’s ZAZÀ. Garbin guested also in Vienna, Berlin, Lisbon, Barcelona and at the opera houses of Odessa and Warsaw. In 1905 at the Teatro Vittorio Emanuele in Turin he took part in the première of the Montemezzì’s òpera GIOVANNI GALLURESE.”

“Hansen made his operatic stage début in Copenhagen at the Royal Danish Theatre in 1908 as a tenor, when he appeared as Sverkel in the romantic opera LIDEN KIRSTEN. He later travelled to Berlin, where he studied under both Louise Reuss-Belce and Lilli Lehmann. He extended his vocal range during his time in Berlin and by 1919 he was able to take on both tenor and baritone roles. During his career he mastered 150 roles using both singer ranges, but tended to prefer operettas. As a young tenor he was popular in heroic leads and appeared in several classical Wagner interpretations, including the title roles in LOHENGRIIN, TANNHÄUSER and PARSIFAL and as Walther von Stolzing in DIE MEISTERSINGER VON NÜRNBERG. Hansen also performed the roles of Don José in Bizet’s CARMEN and the hunter Konrad in the romantic opera HANS HEILING by Heinrich Marschner. As a baritone he took on the title character in Verdi’s RIGOLETTO.”

“Salomea Kruszelnicka [was praised] both by audiences and prominent early twentieth-century collaborative musicians who deeply admired her vocal and acting abilities. Arturo Toscanini, for instance, was pleased to conduct her in several roles and secured an invitation for her to perform at the Metropolitan Opera (which never came to pass). Richard Strauss reportedly said that Kruszelnicka's interpretations of both title roles in his operas ELEKTRA and SALOME were 'perfect'. Giacomo Puccini was deeply indebted to her for stepping in to rescue the title role in MADAMA BUTTERFLY, therefore helping to revive the now famous opera after its disastrous début.... Kruszelnicka's achievements as a singer and dramatic interpreter at the beginning of the twentieth century certainly allow her a place of prominence on any list of great singers who unquestionably have advanced the art of singing and the dramatic interpretation of opera and song literature.

“Landouzy was a stalwart of the Opéra-Comique where she made her début as Rosina in IL BARBIÈRE DI SIVIGLIA (11 November 1889). She also appeared in various French provincial houses, notably Royan, Nice, and Aix-les-Bains. Outside France, she frequently appeared at the Monnaie and Monte Carlo. Landouzy created the role of Marie d’Angleterre in Messager’s LA BASOCHE (30 May 1890, Opéra-Comique) and Clorinde in Pierné’s LA FILLE DE TABARIN. She also participated in the French premiere of Verdi’s FALSTAFF (Nanette) in the presence of the composer at the Opéra-Comique on 18 April 1894. Her recording legacy is particularly important. There is no difficulty in reconciling her recorded voice with her solid reputation.”

"[Lehmann]...sent a thrill through the house which was intensified fourfold when her clarion tones rang out....Mme Lehmann's voice was a full-toned dramatic soprano, immense in volume and resonance, and of voluptuous quality....In moments of tragic fury her voice pealed like a trumpet....her tone production was that of a consummate singer....What seems to me most important to record was the impressive grandure of her greatest operatic impersonations. This grandure was inherent in the woman."

“Having made his début in 1890 as Faust at the Théâtre des Arts in Rouen, Leprestre was hired at the Théâtre de la Monnaie. While at Brussels, he took part in the world première of Jan Blockx’s MAÎTRE MARTIN in November 1892. The young tenor was also featured in the local premieres of WERTHER in January 1893 (a few days after it opened at the Opéra-Comique) and Alfred Bruneau’s L’ATTAQUE DU MOULIN the following year. His success in WERTHER must have been brought to Massenet’s attention, since in September 1894, Leprestre made his Opéra-Comique début as Des Grieux at an important revival of MANON which marked the role début of Georgette Bréjean-Gravérie (not yet Silver), historically the third major exponent of the role, and for whom Massenet subsequently wrote the Fabliau as an alternative to the Gavotte. Leprestre’s own début was by no means eclipsed by hers: the Annales du théâtre et de la musique commented on the pleasant timbre of the ‘charming tenor’, adding that ‘the exquisite use he made of his mezza voce reminded us of the unforgettable creator of the part, poor Talazac.’ (Jean-Alexandre Talazac, who had premiered the parts of Hoffmann, Gérald, and Des Grieux, had just died on 26 December 1896.) Leprestre sang at the Opéra-Comique for four seasons and during that time was the company’s third most regular tenor, after his coeval Edmond Clément and along with Adolphe Maréchal, who joined its roster in 1895. When Leprestre recorded his 11 sides for Odéon in 1905, his operatic career was largely behind him, by then confined to the provinces. They do, however, convey a good impression of this fine singer, then only 41. He can be heard to particular advantage...the resonant, well-projected voice, free at the top, is characterized by its clear, attractive, slightly nasal timbre....Another classic French Opéra-Comique tradition is the effective use of voix mixte and ‘covering’ at the top. This feature is also in evidence in Sylvain’s romance from LES DRAGONS DE VILLARS....As for the MANON aria (missing the middle section as is often the case in early recordings) it is a classic account, vibrant yet free from exaggeration, with a subtle, unaffected use of portamento, and a useful testimony of an important revival of the work, for which Leprestre probably benefited from the composer’s advice.”

“Litvinne’s was one of the most powerful and penetrating female voices to have been captured by the early gramophone. As we listen to her records, we are squarely confronted both with the glories and the flaws of her amazing vocal instrument, and there is no doubt that we are hearing a completely individual voice driven by intense musical and dramatic conviction....In 1904 or 1905, Félia Litvinne recorded five sides in Paris for the Fonotipia label....the operatic sides are available both as original pressings and as 1930s Odeon reissues pressed from the metal masters on superior shellac....[and] we can only be grateful that Litvinne’s [operatic] four sides are among the best sounding Fonotipias from this period....Over the past 15 years, I have been searching the great collections of the world to find superior copies of Litvinne’s records and I have come to the conclusion that it would practically be a miracle to find unplayed copies of records this old.”

“Oreste Luppi made his début in 1892 at the Theatre in Foligno. His main houses were La Scala, the Constanzi, Regio in Turin, Genoa, Florence and Naples. He was the first Prince Gremin in the 1900 La Scala premiere of EUGEN ONÉGIN. Luppi created a number of roles, but his most important creation was in Mascagni’s LE MASCHERE. Luppi also guested outside of Italy, including Covent Garden and the Teatro Colón. After his career he taught singing in Milan where he died at Verdi’s Casa di Riposo. Oreste Luppi was Fonotipia’s star basso, and his records which dated from the company’s beginnings were of fine quality and splendid execution. There was more than a hint of Arimondi in the ease and flexibility of style and the expressive use of tone colour, and he pointed his phrases and sang with a clarity and sonority only to be found in the true bass.”

“Beginning his career in 1908 in character and buffo roles at the Paris Opéra in 1908, Maguenat soon moved to more substantial repertoire. In 1913 he appeared in the Gaîté-Lyrique world premiere of Février’s CARMOISINE. From 1914-17 he sang a variety of roles at Monte Carlo, including Amonasro and Germont, as well as principal roles in MADAME SANS-GÈNE (Giordano) and LES CADEAUX DE NOËL (Gunsbourg). Maguenat was also with the Chicago Opera, Covent Garden, 1915-19, and in 1922 made his début at the Paris Opéra as Hérode in HÉRODIADE. He was also part of Melba’s 1924 Australian touring company. Beginning in 1914, Maguenat recorded acoustically for Odéon, and is in the electric Columbia set of excerpts from PELLÉAS ET MÉLISANDE (Debussy) with Nespoulous and Dufranne.” - Lawrence F. “Gustav Matzner enjoyed a thriving career in Viennese Operetta at the turn of the last century, especially at the Neues Hamburg Operetten-Theater and in Berlin at the Berliner Theater, in operettas such as DER OBERSTEIGER, PUPPENMÄDEL. DIE LIEBE AUGUSTIN and DIE LUSTIGE GITTE, the latter in which he participated in the 1907 Gramophone recording. This first recording of a substantially complete version of the score was made in 1907 with Marie Ottmann and Gustav Matzner in the lead roles.” - Patrick O’Connor, A VIENNESE WHIRL, Gramophone, Oct., 2005, pp. 48–52

“Victor Maurel was not only a popular idol, highly regarded by critics, respected by managements, and held in awe by his colleagues...Calvé, then a young woman, remembers him as ‘a man of genius’. His dramatic gifts were so extraordinary that they dominated the minds of those who saw him, and almost made them overlook his voice, which was, nevertheless, of unusual quality, full of colour and exceptionally expressive...It was after returning to La Scala, in 1882, and singing the title-role in the first performance of the revised edition of SIMON BOCCANEGRA, that he began an association with Verdi that led to his creation of Iago in OTELLO in 1887, and six years afterwards, the title-role in FALSTAFF. He went on to sing both roles throughout the opera world, in Paris, St. Petersburg, Vienna, London and New York, always to great acclaim. In 1892 Maurel created Tonio in PAGLIALCCI at the dal Verme, Milan. It was at Maurel’s suggestion that Leoncavallo composed the Prologue, and Tonio originally had the last words: ‘la commedia è finita,’ a practice which continued as long as Maurel sang the role. In 1894 he made his Met bow as Iago, following it two months later with Falstaff. Henderson, now at the New York Times, was very appreciative...”

- Michael Scott, Marston Program Notes

“...[the ‘Quand’ero paggio’] is arguably Maurel’s most famous recording....He sings three verses, the first two in Italian; the last in French, yet each time varying his tonal quality, and with a lightness of touch and infinitely varying nuance. The over-effusive studio audience [with studio applause] further enhances the charm of the recording....The whole aria is rendered with a verve that almost allows you to ‘see’ his facial expression....Maurel is truly respectful of Tosti’s intentions and he sings con amore with his typical elegance of manner and beautifully enunciated text....It is the work of a masterful artist....One can imagine he would have sung the [Don Giovanni] aria with a melting mezza voce in his prime that would have been bewitching. He is frequently at odds with the pianist but it hardly matters and just adds charm to the recording....It was Verdi who chose Maurel to create Iago and Falstaff, despite the availability of many great Italian baritones. [Maurel] was indeed a unique genius and master of his art. Obviously, Verdi wanted his first Iago to be a master of nuance and vocal colour. He chose well with Maurel....it is a worthy memento of the creator.”

“This splendidly gifted contralto spent three years at Cologne before being named the principal contralto at Hamburg; there she sang with many of the greats of her day, including Caruso during his guest appearances. Metzger sang at Bayreuth in 1901, 1902, 1904 and 1912, where she was most noted for her stately interpretations of Waltraute in GÖTTERDÄMMERUNG and Erda in SIEGFRIED she taught in Berlin until her being Jewish made escape necessary; she fled to Brussels. She was deported to Auschwitz in late 1942….It becomes clear almost instantly that Metzger took her records quite seriously, and it is probably fair to assume we are left with a relatively accurate account of what was heard by her audiences. On records, Metzger displays the sort of otherworldly, deep and compelling voice needed for Wagner’s earth mothers and all-knowing goddesses.”

“Anton Moser was admired in Mozart, singing Masetto in the first Salzburg Mozart festival in 1906. Additionally, he portrayed the two Wagner Alberichs, Verdi’s Giorgio Germont, and both Falke and Frank in DIE FLEDERMAUS. He sang Frédéric in the local premiere of LAKMÉ and the High Priest in SAMSON ET DALILA. His records of Schubert songs for Odeon are surprisingly modern in concept.”

“In virtually every recording [Muratore] demonstrates a very well-schooled technique. The voice, although of considerable weight, is bright and beautifully controlled. His singing through the passaggio allows a smooth transition into his extension (upper register), which contains some very impressive ringing top A naturals and B flats. He had mastery over his mezza voce, understood chiaroscuro by colouring his tone and was able to produce floated piano head tones, using these vocal effects with good taste. This is coupled with informed phrasing, a good legato and, where required, a true sense of drama….In his singing, Muratore’s use of dynamics and tonal colour can convey an effect, at times, of a lovely voice. This is something not given to all singers.”

"In 1883 Navarini made his La Scala début and sang with success at the Teatro Costanzi of Rome. In 1894 he sang at La Scala in the premiere of the revised version of Verdi’s DON CARLOS. In 1892 he took part at the Teatro Carlo Felice, Genoa in the premiere of Franchetti’s CRISTOFORO COLOMBO. He made guest appearances in London (1887), Monte Carlo (1900), Prague (1901), St. Petersburg, Madrid, Barcelona, Buenos Aires, Moscow, Odessa and Seville. Navarini achieved shining success especially in Russia. In the 1898-99 season he performed at La Scala in Wagner’s MEISTERSINGER under Toscanini. In 1902 he toured the USA with an opera troupe under the direction of Pietro Mascagni and he excited sensation especially as Il Cieco in IRIS. He retired from the stage in 1912. "After studying at the Ghent Conservatory, Jean Noté made his concert début in 1883; his opera début followed in Lille in 1885. Noté sang for several years in the provinces, then won a contract with the Paris Opéra, where he made his début in the spring of 1893, in the title role of RIGOLETTO. For the next twenty-nine years, he was a versatile pillar of that company. On 31 May 1904, he sang the Comte de Luna at the Palais Garnier premiere of LE TROUVÈRE. Noté reached Covent Garden in 1897 and sang seven major roles there. During his single season at the Metropolitan Opera, he appeared in ten consecutive Sunday concerts and twenty opera performances. His assignments included FAUST and MANON; he was Escamilo in CARMEN on the night of Maria Gay's début, in a production that included Geraldine Farrar as Micaëla and Caruso as Don José, with Toscanini conducting. Frances Alda was the Gilda to Noté's Rigoletto, which had Louise Homer as Maddalena and Alessandro Bonci as the Duke. He sang at the Opéra until just three weeks before his death, with the RIGOLETTO of 11 March 1922 as his last performance. He died on 1 April."

In South America as well she often appeared in the 1894-95 season and again in 1899 at the Teatro de la Opera in Buenos Aires, at the opera houses of Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo as well as in the concert hall. In Italy she appeared practically in all leading theaters with success (Teatro Argentina, Teatro Costanzi in Rome (in among other things the première of Pietro Vallini’s IL VOTO, 27 Nov., 1895), Teatro Pagliano and Teatro della pergola in Florence, Teatro San Carlo in Naples (among other roles in 1895 as Sieglinde in DIE WALKÜRE, in 1896 as Mimì in the première there of Puccini’s LA BOHÈME, in 1911 as Amneris in AÏDA and as Laura in LA GIOCONDA), Teatro Carlo Felice in Genoa and La Scala, Milan). At La Scala she sang in 1902 as Marguerite in Berlioz’s LA DAMNATION DE FAUST, in 1907 as Brangäne in TRISTAN UND ISOLDE. In May, 1897 she appeared in Verdi’s FALSTAFF in the opening of the newly-built Teatro Massimo in Palermo. In 1912 she guested at the Teatro Comunale in Bologna as Brangäne, in 1912 in the same house as Ortrud in LOHENGRIN.”

- Ashot Arakelyan, Forgotten Opera Singers
Among those 'minor' companies that flourished in France before the end of the first decade, there is one that stands out above all the others for its originality of organization and its technical excellence. A.P.G.A. (L'Association Phonique des Grands Artistes) was founded in May, 1906…with a group of ten artists: Agustarello Affre, Charlotte Agussol, André Gresse, Jean Noté, Alice Verlet, Henri Weber, Bergeret, Dranem, Mayol & Polin….The records were uniform in size: 27cm. or about 10½ inches….All A.P.G.A. records play at an average speed of 86 r.p.m., and I know of many that go well over 90. These extraordinary speeds might have accounted for the lack of sales….However, when pitched properly, these records are astoundingly good—I might venture to say better than any other needle-cut record of the period.”

"...in fact Alfred Piccaver was a superb operatic tenor.  There is no other English-born tenor I can think of who even comes close. He was born in Northern England and emigrated at a young age, with his parents, to America. He spent his early youth in the US, and studied in New York. He never felt at home in America, however, and later became an English citizen....his career was almost exclusively in Vienna, where he made his début in 1910, and was an instant success. He would go on to sing over 25 years at the Staatsoper, enjoying an enormous success there. He was so fond of Vienna and the Viennese way of life that he essentially became a permanent resident. Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, reportedly offered him a very lucrative contract in the 1920's to sing at the Met, but he declined, simply because he was so happy in Vienna. The result of this snub was that he was never again offered an opportunity to sing at the Met. This might sound like a head-strong and foolish move on Piccaver's part (today it certainly would be) but one needs to remember that the Met was not the international house then that it is today. On the contrary, Vienna, a major European cultural center, would have out-ranked it. He was given a state funeral, so permanently had his memory been etched upon the Viennese." - Edmund St Austell

"Renaud is often termed, and rightly, the French Battistini: there's the same smoothness of tonal emission throughout his range, the same seamless line, the same care in matching text to that line. In other words, there's an object-lesson here in the aristocratic art of the French school, derived from Lassalle and Maurel, Renaud's great predecessors." - Alan Blyth, GRAMOPHONE, March, 1998

1381. JEAN RIDDEZ: LA COUPE DU ROI DE THULÉ – Il est venu ce jour de lutte (Eugène Diaz de la Peña) / ÉMILIE DALMÉE: LOHENGREN – Air d'Elsa.

"Jean (Arthur) Riddez sang at the Paris Opéra, 1900-10, débuting in the title role of RIGOLETTO and sang as well Reyer’s SIGURD and SALAMMBO, and Saint-Saëns' HENRY VIII and SAMSON ET DALILA, Xavier Leroux’s THE VAGABOND and Massenet’s THAÏS. From 1908 to 1910 he sang roles such as Lohengrin, Faust, etc., but then returned to his baritone repertoire. He sang music composed by candidates for the Prix de Rome, including Caplet and Ravel. He sang for the Montréal Opera Company (1912-1913) where he debuted in Massenet’s HÉRODIADE (12 November, 1912). There he also sang in RIGOLETTO, ROMÉO ET JULIET, LE JONGLEUR DE NOTRE DAME, TOSCA, CARMEN, LES CONTES D’HOFFMANN, THAÏS and Erlanger’s CHRISTMAS EVE. With the Boston Opera Company in the 1911-12 season he sang the French repertoire, especially Pelléas in 1912. Invited to perform again as Athanaël in THAÏS (1920), he moved to Montréal where he devoted himself mainly to teaching, privately and in institutions like the École Normale de Musique. Riddez became a naturalized Canadian on 2 Sep., 1939 in Montréal. His daughter Juanita Riddez débuted 24 June, 1947 at the Opéra-Comique in Paris, but soon abandoned her career." - Hélène Panneton, HISTORICA CANADA

“Norma became one of Russ’ most frequently performed and acclaimed roles. ‘Casta diva’, included here, receives a worthy performance. The attractive, silvery shimmer on the voice suits this moonlit aria, whilst the poised vocal line and accurately executed downward scales demonstrate a skilled florid technique. A further instance of this is even more masterfully revealed in Meyerbeer’s L’AFRICAINE where the concluding bars offer a technical agility and trill that would be the envy of many coloratura sopranos. Russ has the ability to lighten her tone for such passages and thus is able easily to encompass roles almost throughout the entire soprano repertoire.”

“Russ’ voice, of marvelous timbre and silvery brightness, homogeneous and resonant in every register, was emitted with a fluidity and lightness truly ‘belcantistic’…. probably the only Italian singer in the first twenty years of the 20th century who succeeded in expressing completely the old formula of the ‘soprano drammatico d’agilità’. “ - Rodolfo Celletti

“Émile Scaramberg’s [recordings] are undeniably among the great treasures of pre-1914 French singing. They reveal a remarkably phonogenic voice of considerable intrinsic beauty, effortlessly produced, even throughout its range, admirably supported, and particularly impressive in piano singing. Equally importantly, they show Scaramberg to be a committed performer, a tasteful yet generous artist who, not just seemingly undaunted by the unenviable conditions under which the recordings were made, always conveys the impression that he is going to try to give the performance of his life. One can only marvel at the thought of the extraordinary roster of forts ténors the Paris Opéra had on its roster when he sang there between 1903 and 1907: Affre, Rousselière, Alvarez, Muratore, and others. On the evidence of his recorded legacy, Scaramberg may have been the best of them.” - Vincent Giroud, Marston Program Notes

1407. PIERO SCHIAVAZZI: CAVALLERIA – Avete altro a dirmi? / Addio alla madre. 10½” Milano Fonotipia 39902/03 (XPh 2186/85). A to M-A, lovely copy has lt.rubs & infinitessimal scrs, inaud. MB 15

“Schiavazzi was charmed by the dynamic style of Verismo and devoted himself to the verismo school of which he soon became one of the most representative singers. His voice had a charming timbre of pure tenor color which was described as having a glossy texture and golden quality. “ - Ashot Arakelyan, Forgotten Opera Singers

“Gabriel-Valentin Soulacroix...had an extremely striking career, encompassing a number of prestigious opera houses and an unlikely array of roles. During his seven seasons in Brussels, he was a regular spring guest at Covent Garden, where he made his début in 1881. This came to an end with his engagement at the Opéra-Comique, where he was a favorite as Figaro and where Hérold’s ZAMPA was revived for him. He was the first Clément Marot in Messager’s LA BASOCHE (1890) as well as Ford for the French premiere of FALSTAFF (1894), among many other creations. After nine seasons at the Opéra-Comique, he left to star in a successful revival of Planquette’s RIP at the Gaité, where he also created the same composer’s title role in PANURGE (1895).” - Christopher Norton-Welsh, Marston Program Notes
“Storchio was an important Italian lyric soprano who starred in the world premieres of operas by Puccini, Leoncavallo, Mascagni and Giordano. Renowned throughout her homeland for her vivacious acting and sparkling stage presence, she possessed a smallish voice which deteriorated prematurely due to hard use, over-parting, and flaws in her technique. Storchio studied at the Milan Conservatory before making her operatic début as Micaëla in Bizet’s CARMEN at Milan’s Teatro Dal Verme in 1892. Three years later, she débuted at Italy’s most famous opera house, La Scala, performing in Massenet’s WERTHER. Milan became her home base from then on, but she also appeared during the pre-World War I period at theatres in other key Italian cities, including Rome and her native Venice. She toured South America and Spain, too, and undertook singing engagements in Paris and Moscow, unwisely venturing parts as heavy as that of Tosca. In 1921, by which time her voice was in marked decline, she sang in Chicago and New York. Her final public performance was as Cio-Cio San in Puccini’s MADAMA BUTTERFLY at Barcelona in 1923. (She had sung this same part in the first performance of Butterfly, at La Scala, in 1904.) Storchio left a small legacy of 78-rpm gramophone recordings made during the early years of the 20th century.”

- Ashot Arakelyan, Forgotten Opera Singers
"I remember the baritone Riccardo Stracciari's wonderful vocal control. One was first aware of a large, ringing and joyful sound, rich in overtones. Every note held left behind a lingering echo, like the sound made by striking a teaspoon on Baccarat glass. I don't know why, but even though half a century has elapsed since I heard it, this echo is still in my ears.” - Sergei Levik, THE LEVIK MEMOIRS, pp.105-06

"Takács made his his stage debut In 1883, at the National Opera in Budapest, and up to his death he was a famed member of the National Opera. In 1902 he sang in Budapest in the premiere of Goldmark’s GÖTZ VON BERLICHINGEN. In 1903 he sang Scarpia in the Budapest premiere of Puccini's TOSCA. In 1893 he sang Biterolf at the Bayreuth Festival in TANNHÄUSER. His repertoire included roles in operas of Mozart, Meyerbeer, Wagner, Rossini and Verdi.” - Ashot Arakelyan, Forgotten Opera Singers

“In 1914 Hans Tänzler was engaged by the Court Theatre of Brunswick, where he appeared till 1918. As a guest he also performed at the Dresden Court Opera (1903), Municipal Theatre of Hamburg (1905), in the 1907-08 season in Frankfurt am Main, in 1910 at the German Theatre of Prague, in 1911 at the Court Theatre of Wesbaden, in 1914 at the Berlin Court Opera. From 1907-09 he guested at the Court Opera of Munich, in 1906, 1908 and 1912 at the Vienna Court Opera. Tänzler also appeared in Paris, Budapest, Warsaw, Spain and Russia. In 1912 he sang at the Grand Opéra in Paris in TRISTAN UND ISOLDE. During the 1920’s he went to North America and became a pedagogue in Los Angeles. From 1927-29 he lived in Berlin and appeared still as a guest at Berlin State Opera among other things as Tristan and in EVANGELIMANN (1927). From 1929-31 he participated in the America tour as a member of the German Opera Company and had a great success in Wagner’s operas. Tänzler made a few records for Odeon and Pathe (1909/19).”

“Elvino Ventura made his début in 1894 at the Teatro Epicarmo in Noto and soon was widely recognized as one of the most important tenors in Italy. In 1896 he appeared at the Teatro Regio in Turin as Marzia in Buzzi-Peccia’s FORZA DELL’AMORE. In 1900 he sang at the Teatro Carlo Felice in Genoa the role of Alfredo in LA TRAVIATA. The next year, Ventura appeared at the Teatro Massimo in Palermo as Osaka in Mascagni’s IRIS with Fausta Labia (the wife of the famous tenor Emilio Perea), one of his most famous roles. In 1901 he created the role of Florindo in the premiere of Mascagni’s LE MASCHERE at the Teatro La Fenice in Venice. In 1909, with the Castellano Opera Company, he was heard in Holland and Belgium. He appeared in almost all significant Italian opera stages, also made guest appearances in London, Paris, Buenos Aires, Madrid, St. Petersburg and Warsaw. In his book, Titta Ruffo wrote that he had the honour to sing with Elvino Ventura and soprano Pandolfini in LA TRAVIATA.”

“César Vezzani’s clarion voice and robust approach has won for him a secure place in the pantheon of great French tenors of the 20th Century. He made more than 170 sides, most of which were issued only in France and are, today, eagerly sought by collectors....Heilbronner was born in Paris, where she made her début at the Opéra-Comique in 1907. She sang lighter soprano roles such as Mélisande in ARIANE ET BARBE-BLEUE, Micaela in CARMEN, Eurydice in ORPHEE ET EURYDICE, and Rozenn in LE ROI D’YS. She also made occasional appearances at the Paris Opéra and at the Galté-Lyrique (CENDRILLON), as well as in many theaters and casinos in the French and Belgian provinces up to the First World War. After the First World War she continued her career in particular at La Monnaie (1910–1921), and in provincial theaters. She devoted herself thereafter mainly to concert work in France and Belgium during the late 1920s.”

“Viñas ‘Celeste Aïda’ is one of the very best, once we have accepted the fact that it is all going to be rather loud. His legato is exemplary, as is his use of portamento, though Verdi’s score calls for even more. His technical mastery is evident in the descending phrase on ‘vicino al sol’, five bars before the end, which he begins on a beautiful and quite soft F and continues to diminish in volume as he descends.”

- Michael Aspinall, Marston Program Notes

“Vogelstrom’s first operatic appearance was in Mannheim, 1905, as Tamino in DIE ZAUBERFLÖTE. He became most closely identified with Wagner and appeared in several Wagnerian roles at Bayreuth early in his career. From 1912 through 1929 he was a leading tenor in Dresden, participating there in the house premieres of Strauss’s ARIADNE AUF NAXOS (1912) and DIE FRAU OHNE SCHATTEN (1919). He was a guest in many German and Austrian houses, as well as at Covent Garden. After retiring, he taught. Vogelstrom was an energetic recording artist, having graced several labels, including Pathé, Parlophon, and Homocord.”

Kapiton Denisovich Zaporozhets made his operatic début as a member of the Zimin Private Opera Company, performing there from 1909 to 1920. While there, on 7 October 1909, he created the role of General Polkan in the world premiere of Rimsky-Korsakov's LE COQ D'OR. He toured with the Royal Opera in 1909 and performed the role of Pimen at the Paris Opéra in a production of BORIS GODUNOV. From 1910 to 1914 he sang at the Bolshoi Opera. In 1913 he appeared in two famous productions of KHOVANTSCHINA, one at the Théâtre des Champs Elysées and again at the Drury Lane Opera in London, in both instances singing Khovansky to Chaliapin's Dosifei. He made further guest appearances in Rome and in the United States before WW I. After this and during the Russian Revolution he left Russia to reside in Paris. He sang repeatedly at the Monte Carlo in such roles as Kontchak in PRINCE IGOR, Ramfis, Sparafucile, Colline and Gudal in Rubinstein's THE DEMON. He made guest appearances at the Teatro Colón in 1924, most notably in their premiere of PIQUE DAME. In 1926 he became closely associated with the Opéra Russe Ensemble and was heard in Paris as Sparafucile, Varlaam and in a celebrated production of Rimsky-Korsakov's THE LEGEND OF THE INVISIBLE CITY OF KITEZH.

Regarding AUCTION #146 (Closing Date: Friday, 29 May, 2015), The Minimum Bid ("MB") is a guide which has been set in accordance with current market value, determined through constant monitoring of auction sales during recent years. In cases of extreme rarity, the actual realized price may far exceed the Minimum Bid, while in other cases an item may realize a price very close to the Minimum Bid, and, occasionally, the Minimum Bid itself. Please simply bid in accordance with whatever a given item means to you.

TELEPHONE HOURS are 10:00 am - 5:00 PM, EST - Monday – Friday, when PETER FORD is available to take bids and answer any questions. Bids may be submitted by e-mail, FAX, telephone or (bearing closing date in mind) postal mail. [(802) 524-7673] or FAX [1 888 819 4831].
